

PRESIDENTIAL SEARCH

SPARTANBURG METHODIST COLLEGE

THE OPPORTUNITY

Spartanburg Methodist College will celebrate its centennial in 2011 and the next president will lead the institution into its second century. He/she will implement an exciting new strategic planning process that will propel this two-year liberal arts institution to its next level of academic excellence. Bolstering this initiative will be the opportunity to launch a capital campaign for the purposes of building an academic and student life complex and greatly increasing the size of the endowment.

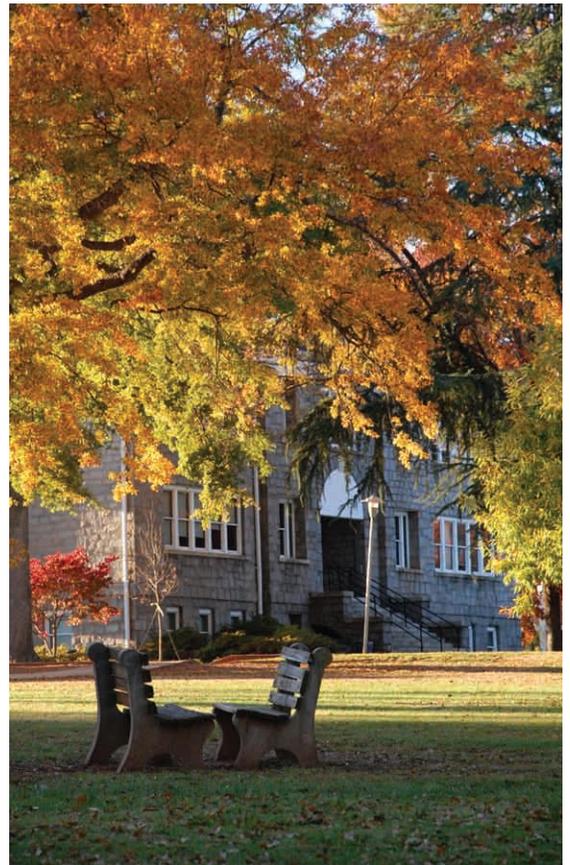

THE COLLEGE

Spartanburg Methodist College is located in Spartanburg, South Carolina on a beautiful 110-acre campus. Its buildings are a mix of old and new with impressive suite style student residence halls. The rolling campus has inviting quads and attractive landscaping. This part of South Carolina has five nearby colleges, a regional airport serving Greenville and Spartanburg, and is within an hour and a half of Charlotte's Douglas International Airport.

The College is among the few institutions in the United States – and the only one in South Carolina – that is residential, church-affiliated, regionally accredited and devoted exclusively to the freshman and sophomore years. The faculty and administration are dedicated to the College's mission of transformation. Through a focus on the liberal arts, the curriculum enables students whose academic talents are sometimes unrecognized to prepare for the next level in their college experience. Classes are small and faculty pride themselves in working one-on-one with students. There is a familial environment that permeates the campus.

Students are encouraged to develop themselves as leaders with social responsibility and openness to a full range of ideas as they prepare for entrance into four-year colleges. Presently 35-40 percent of the students are members of racial minorities and almost all students are "first generation."

A Methodist minister founded Spartanburg Methodist College as the Textile Industrial Institute. Since its inception, the College was, and presently still is, related to the South Carolina Annual Conference and General Board of Global Ministries of The United Methodist Church.

Born out of the Social Gospel movement in the early 1900s, the Institute provided high school level courses to adults working in textile mills as preparation for advanced education or employment. In 1927, the Institute added two years of college-level work to the curriculum. After the high school courses were dropped, the Institute became the Spartanburg Junior College in 1942. As curriculum, faculty and student enrollment expanded, it became Spartanburg Methodist College in 1974.

Spartanburg Methodist College is accredited by the Commission on Colleges, Southern Association of Colleges and Schools to award Associate Degrees. Carnegie classifies the College as Assoc/PrivNFP.

MISSION

The mission of Spartanburg Methodist College, a two-year, coeducational institution related to the United Methodist Church, is to develop the worth and abilities of each individual through programs relevant to academic and personal needs. The College strives for a values-oriented atmosphere in the Christian tradition in which students can develop sensitivity to the needs of others and from which they can assume responsible positions in society.

BACKGROUND

Dr. Charles P. Teague has faithfully served as president of Spartanburg Methodist College for the past 12 years. He will retire on June 30, 2009. During his tenure much has been accomplished: enrollment has increased from a little over 500 students to 750; full-time faculty numbers have increased; two new named residence halls have been constructed, each with $1 million naming gifts; a new board room and technology center has been built; the campus has been beautified; a new master plan has been adopted; and a number of renovations have been undertaken.

Opportunities for the next president include greatly increasing the fund raising prowess of the institution; building specific initiatives into the strategic plan and relating them to multiple-year budgets; developing new revenue streams; increasing the compensation of faculty and staff; and improving handicap access to older buildings on campus.

The president needs to be comfortable in working with The United Methodist Church. At present, the South Carolina Conference contributes $750,000 per year to the College and grants are available to it from the General Board of Global Ministries.

Dr. Cann is a distinguished member of the College's faculty and member of the Presidential Search Committee.

CHALLENGES

Major challenges for the next president are:

- Taking the institution to its next level of academic excellence; encouraging faculty and academic administrators to develop new programs and increasing the number of doctorates among the full-time faculty; continuing to increase the number of articulation agreements with private and public four-year institutions;
- Engaging in major gift fund raising; increasing the donor base; leading the College's next capital campaign for new buildings and endowment purposes; hiring the next chief institutional advancement officer to assist in these endeavors;
- Enhancing diversified revenue streams in auxiliary enterprises, conference income, and building anew continuing and distance education for adult students;
- Giving priority attention to increasing faculty and staff salaries as revenues increase;
- Building upon the institution's strategic plan of continuing its niche as a quality two-year institution by identifying clear priorities for the future; creating multiple-year budgets to fund these priorities; engaging the College community in identifying and benchmarking the future thrusts; developing an exciting shared vision for Spartanburg Methodist College;
- Seeking additional two-year students who can benefit from a personalized and transformational experience at the College; emphasizing retention as part of strategic enrollment management; encouraging adult students to matriculate;
- Continuing to create a familial atmosphere that mutually supports all stakeholders;
- Creating new opportunities for increasing diversity among faculty, administrators, and staff; and
- Sharing best higher education practices with all constituents of the institution.

QUALIFICATIONS
